LITERATURE.

SWEDENBORG AND HIS WRITINGS. Mr. Samuel M. Warren has published, through J. B. Lippincott & Co., "A Compendium of the Theological Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg." Such a book is almost a necessity to every one who wishes for to read the original books, in ten thousand or more pages, would be a task appalling even to a patient student of theology. The "Compendium" con-tains a biographical introduction by Mr. John Bigelow, who writes cautiously, yet appreciatively, of his subject, and reminds the public that Swedenborg was not the ignor-ant enthusiast that many intelligent people se him to have been, but an advanced scientist practical man-the inventor of the stove, the first man to put forth the atomic theory, the father of the modern science of crystallography, the discoverer, before Franklin, of the identity of lightning stricity; the anticipator of Laplace in the theory that planetary motion is derived from the sun, and the original formulator of the law of action and reaction, or, as it is now called, the theory of the conservation of force. The book contains nearly t octavo pages, and offers a portrait sug gestive of the familiar pictures of Benjamin Franklin, except that the indications of worldly wisdom are less prominent than in the American sage, between whose character and that of the Swedish thinker there were strong points of resemblance.

"ANNALS OF THE WAR."

"The Annals of the War, written by Leading Par-ticipants, North and South," is the title of a handvolume of 800 pages, issued by the Philadel phia Times Publishing Company. The contents consist of a series of articles which originally appeared in the weekly edition of the Times, and they cover ground but little touched before. The writers are not all "leading" participants, though the list affords sufficient leaven to warrant the use of the word, for we find in the long list the names, General T. D. ooden, General G, T. Beauregard, General C. M. Wilcox, General James Longstreet, General James H. Wilson, General Maury, General John McCausland, General Alfred Pleas-Secretary Gideon Welles and others equally well known. The articles themselves canot be properly called historical, but they are important as affording material for future historians. for they present facts personally known to be true value in the future. The fact that many of the gentlemen who have contributed their quota to thi bulky volume are not so well known as those we have mentioned does not detract from the value of the book, for it is only by opening the door to all that authentic material can be gathered. General Longstreet describes the campaign of Lee

Pennsylvania, and has also a chapter on "The Mistakes of Gettysburg," as viewed from a Confederate standpoint. He claims that had Lee seen the first day the advantages of his position top annals of the war would probably have been vastly different. He assumes that neither Meade nor Lee appreciated the full extent of their opportunities when they first found themselves face to face. This is probably a correct view, for we know that Meade relied more on the dogged deterainstion of his veterans than on his own skill, though he was too good a soldier not to take prompt advantage of the natural advantages of the ground on which Lee's tardiness had placed his army. erai McCausland, the cavalry leader who burned the town of Chambersburg, in 1864, contributes a were and the reasons that led to the step. Colonel Biddle writes on "Meade at Gettysurg." and furnishes a tolerably clear state ment of the tactical movements of the four days in that memorable month of July. He, however, is in error when describing the seizure of the Little Round Top, for he says that General Warren had taken possession of that important point (really the key to Meade's left) before Longstreet had attacked and doubled up the Third corps, under Sickles. In point of fact, the Little Round Top was in posses ion of a considerable Confederate force at the very ment that the Fifth corps arrived on the grou to succor the Third. When Sickles' command had fallen back, and the Fifth faced the brunt of Longstreet's assault, General Warren ordered Vincent's and Weed's brigades to storm the Round Top. The position was speedily taken, but not without some desperate fighting, for among the killed were both of the brigade commanders and O'Rourke, the gallant colonel of the 140th New York. We make this correction, not to condemn the whole chapter, but to show how easily errors may creep

To the general reader, especially of the rising genthese "Annals of the Late War" supply a want long felt. Being entirely distinct from each other, the chapters may be read at random or at long intervals and the information stored in the memory just when it happens to be fitted to receive the impressions of the writer. As such it will be welcomed by those unable to gather libraries, and should have a large

Mr. Stoddard has written an elaborate preface to a new edition of Sidney Smith's "Wit and Wisdom." which A. C. Armstrong & Co. will publish.

One of the very best books of its kind that we have seen is "Zig Zag Journeys in Europe," by Hezekiah Batterworth, published by Estes & Laurist. It is also the first book we have seen bearing the date 1880. The writer as a teacher takes a class of boys to England and France and shows them all the place of historical interest, giving the most interesting stories connected with such places. Young people who would turn away from an ordinary volume of history will devour this with eagerness. The author's style is easy and entertaining. Not the least attractive feature of the book are the illustrations, which are of unusual excellence.

A new and final edition (the fourth) of Mr. Richard Herne Shepherd's "Bibliography of Ruskin," con. taining many additional items that have lately come to light, is published and may be had, like the for mer editions, on application to the editor at his private address, No. 322 Fulham road, London, S. W.

Books about General Grant multiply, for obvious reasons. Here we have "General U. S. Grant, His Early Life and Military Career, with a Brief Account of His Presidential Administration and Tour Around the World," by J. K. Larke (W. J. Johnston, New York). This is a reprint of a book published in 1864. with some thirty pages of new matter added, which do duty for the last year of Grant's war services, for his eight years in the Presidency and for the two years and a half of his journey round the world. A hastily written "pot boiler" at the time of its first publication, it is now put forth with all the gravity of a serious work. No reference is made in this adition to its previous appearance, which is suspicious, to say the least. It smacks of the "Heathen

We have received, through B. W. Pond & Co., parts 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 of the second series of that dmirable publication "The Native Flowers and Ferns of the United States," by Thomas Mochan, published by the American Natural History Publish ing Company of Philadelphia, The chromo-lithegraphic illustrations are carefully drawn and admi-

The latest of Appletons' health primers is entitled "The Skin and Its Diseases." As it urges the use of soap and water and opposes patent preparations, such as cosmetics and hair invigorators, it deserves wide circulation.

Mr. Murray, the London publisher, has in the press the first volume of Canon Ashwell's "Life of late Bishop Wilberforce." The Athennum says it will carry the narrative down to the year 1848. Let ters to and from Mr. Gladstone on Dr. Newman's "Theory of Development" are given. Wilberforce's acceptance of the See of Oxford, his organization of his diocese, and his entrance into the House of Lords occupy the latter chapters of the volume.

Stedman contributes an appreciative and critical essay on Bayard Taylor to the November Scribner, will be continued. Mr. Stedman's intimacs with Mr. Taylor, as well as his ability as a critic,

Mr. P. T. Quinn, who is a practical farmer, contributes an article on "The Agricultural Distress in Great Britain" to the November Scribner. "The Princess Idleways" is the title of a fairy story by Mrs. W. J. Hayes, published by Harper & Brothers. It is very prettily told and likely to win warm corner in the youthful heart.

The November number of Appleton's Journal will ontain extracts from the memoirs of Mine. de Remusat, which will be published in book form by D. Appleton & Co.

T.-Whittaker will have ready shortly a "Homiletical Encyclopædia of Illustration in Theology and Morals," by R. A. Bertram. It is a handbook of practical divinity and a commentary on Holy Scripture. The same publisher announces a new edition of Mrs. Sherwood's "Stories on the Church Cate-An attempt is making in England to complete an authorized system of East Indian orthography. The more or less phonetic spelling of the early Euglish soldiers and adventurers has been so hopelessly upset by the modern scholars, who make the confusion worse by differing among themselves as to the English equivalents, that a reform once for all will oe welcome to students of that interesting portion of the world whose maps are such a maze of contradictions in spelling.

A translation of the "Memoirs of the Life and Eventful Career of Field Marshal the Duke of Sallanha," with selections from his correspondence, by the Conde da Carnota" is about to be published by Murray, London. A "Dictionary of Hymnology," a companion to existing hymn books, by the Rev. John Julian, will shortly appear in England. The work is intended to show the origin and history of the hymns contained in the present hymnals used by the Church of Engotland and Ireland, and various dissenting

A French artillery captain, M. le Marchand, has published a work entitled "La Campagne des Anglais dans l'Afghanistan 1878-79." It is generally favorable to the English system.

The London Jewish World says that the Sir Moses Monfenore Literary and Art Society's prize of £15 for English subjects at the Jews' College has been awarded to Nathan Harris, son of the Rev. H. L Harris.

Messrs. Blackwood have in the press a "Handbook of the Church of Scotland, comprising a Sketch of its History, Constitution, Missions Finance, Present Position and Relation to Dissent, by the Rev. James Rankin, D. D., author of "Character Studies in the Old Testament," &c.

Mr. J. W. Zachnsdorfe has in preparation a prac-tical treatise on the art of bookbinding. It will be illustrated with various specimens of fine work, copied by photo-lithography, and numerous wood-

Milton's mother and grandmother are now under discussion in the English literary journals.

The first number of a new monthly education nagazine, The New Method, is announced. Professor Sigmon M. Stern, author of "Studien und Plaueirien," is the editor. It will be mainly devoted to an exposition of the Heuness and Sauveur system of acquiring languages.

The French Academic des Inscript ions et Belle Lettres will award, for the first time, in 1881 the Louis Fould prize, for which the founder has placed at the disposition of the Academy 20,000f. The subject will be "L'Histoire des Arts du Dessin jusqu'au Siècle de Péricles.' By the arts of design are understood sculpture, painting, engraving and architecture, as well as the industrial arts in their relations with these. The jury will consist of five members of the Academy of Inscriptions and Literature, one of that of science and another of that of the fine arts. A competitor need not be a Frenchman

The Moscow Society for the Diffusion of Useful Books is preparing a memoir of Alexander Pushkin and a selection from his writings, to be published on the forthcoming occasion of the unveiling of the monument lately set up in memory of the greatest of Russia's poets at Moscow. A complete edition of his writings is not now to be procured except at a very high price.

Mesers. Chapman & Hall will publish "Personal collections of the Cambridge A. D. C.," being the history of the University Amateur Dramatic Club, written by Mr. F. C. Burnand, its founder. The club has reached the twenty-fifth year of its existence, Alexandre Dumas' novel on the Jesuits, which is, we suppose, to answer Paul Feval's facts by some rather nasty fiction, is, in consequence of partial revelations of the plot, awakening lively expectations gins its second volume of the new series. This wide awake periodical is devoted to out of door sports. It gives a complete record of the sporting interests of the mouth, besides containing interesting articles on "Bodily Exercise," by Professor William Wood "Polo," by Hartweil Barnard, and a well selected miscellaneous department. The trontispiece repre of the National Rifle Association at Creedmoor, L. I. of which a full report is given.

The Rev. Daniel Wise, D. D., who has written books for children for the past thirty years, has a new volume ready, called "Roderick Ashcourt." which will be published by Lee & Shepard. The same house also have ready for immediate publication a "juvenile" by Mrs. T. W. Higginson, entitled 'Room for One More," illustrated by Mrs. Lucy Gibbons Morse.

It appears that the literary and political worlds were deprived of a long anticipated excitement. The conflict between M. Emile Ollivier and M. Henri Martin, under the pacificatory roof of the Academy, did not take place. This decision was really a vic-tory to the latter, whose laudatory oration in honor of the great patriot Thiers will not be followed by landation of the last Bonapartist Empire from the pen and tongue of M. Ollivier. The reception of Henri Martin into the Academy will take place on November 20.

Mossrs. Baillière, Tindall & Cox, London, announce for publication an English edition from the fifth French of Fau's "Anatomy for Artists," text trans lated by Dr. Carter Blake, and the first part of Professor Darling's "Anatomography."

A circular has been issued inviting philologists and all interested in historical or ethnological research to aid in the preservation of the Lithuanian language, which, it would appear, is being rapidly torced out of existence by Gorman, Polish and Russian. A provisional committee has been formed which numbers among its members M. Mannhardt. of Danzig; Professors Mfklosich, of Vionna; Nesselmann, of Königsberg; Pott, of Halle, and Oberlehre Vocikel, of Tilsit. To the last named all communications are to be addressed, and he invites sympathy and help. The first meeting of the committee wa to be held at Tilsit on the 14th of this month.

In Mr. Charles Ewald's "Representative States men, political studies," he distributes epithets as follows:-Strafford is "the Despotic Minister," Halifax "the Moderate Minister," Walpole "the William Pitt "the Disinterested Minister." Lord El don "the Deliberative Minister," Canning "the Minister," Peel "the Minister of Expediency" and Palmerson "the English Minister."

The unearthing and publication of manuscripts in the English libraries goes on. "Anecdota Bodioi-ana" is the title of a sories to be published in pamphlet form from the Great Oxford Library. The first of the series contains "A Short View of the State of Ireland in 1605 by Sir John Harrington." The Academy artlessly says:- "Even after all that we have heard of the versatility of the men of the Elizabethan age it is certainly strange to find that a country gentleman, who had served in the army, hardly thought 'It necessary to apologize for an ap-plication to be appointed Archbishop of Dublin and Tennyson's "Harold" has found's German trans. lator in Count Albrecht von Wickenburg, who will publish his translation this autumn at Hamburg. Longfellow has long been a popular poet in Ger many, where his works are eagerly translated and read. "The Golden Legend" will shortly be added to the number of these translations. The translator is the Baroness Hohenhausen. The poet has seen the work in MS., and has expressed his satisfaction with it. A selection from Bayard Taylor's poems has been translated into German by Karl Bleibtreu
